Curriculum Development

Curriculum Development Activities

Developed three cutting-edge graduate seminars focusing on the philosophy of oppression (F19), feminist moral psychology (F22), and Summer 2019, Fall non-ideal theories of resistance (S26). Each of these seminars aimed to 2019, Fall 2022, bring our graduate students the latest developments in the philosophy Spring 2026 of oppression/resistance while providing them with the context and tools needed to understand that work.

Developed and taught a new version of PHIL 4/5622: Philosophy & Feminist Theory that put film, literature, and other media into Summer 2021, Fall conversation with classic works in feminist philosophy with the aim of 2021, Spring 2023, honing students ability to connect theory and practice. Fall 2025

Developed and taught a new version of PHIL 4/5010: Ancient Philosophers that offered students sustained engagement with Plato’s Spring 2020, Spring philosophy of love and friendship through close study of two major 2022, Spring 2024, dialogues: Symposium and Phaedrus. Spring 2025, Spring 2026

Developed a new course in the philosophy of race, which I taught twice as PHIL 4/5760 (special topics). Fall 2020, Spring 2022

Collaborative Efforts and Activities

Co-facilitated the Philosophy Department’s Moral/Political/Feminist Philosophy workshop with Prof. Sarah Holtman, meeting regularly Fall 2019–present with graduate students working in these areas to read and discuss drafts of papers and other works in progress. We typically have between 5-10 students in the group.
